Centennial Trail ~ Mirabeau Park & Plantes Ferry Park

Plantes Ferry Park is named after Antoine Plante, a French-Canadian trapper who built a cabin near here in 1849. In 1850, he constructed and operated the first ferry - the only means of crossing the Spokane River in the area. The site is home to the final battle of the Indian Rebellion of 1857 which include the Salish Indians (Spokanes) and Chief Garry. The final battle culminated here with the destruction of over 800 of the Indian horses, their food and tepees. An historical marker is found on this walk, as well as a unique statue of Antoine Plante.
